First Commercial Rocket Launch at Georgia's Spaceport Camden

Georgia passed its first commercial space law this May: The Georgia Space Flight Act, sponsored by Rep. Jason Spencer, with a little help from Jason Kemp and me.

Quick on the heels of that major milestone for Georgia in the new space race comes another. On August 3, Arizona-based satellite launch company Vector Space Systems completed a successful suborbital test launch of its B0.002 test vehicle on the proposed site for Georgia's first commercial spaceport. (Click on the picture to see a video.)

Spaceport Camden is still in development and seeking licensing from the Federal Aviation Administration as a fully-functioning spaceport. But this launch signals strong and feasible interest in the site from the commercial space industry. No surprise, since going back to the 1960s, the same site was on the short list of locations vying for what became the Kennedy Space Center, and was the test site for the world's most powerful rocket engine.

Hardy Law congratulates everyone involved in this remarkable achievement and we look forward to more!

Disastrous Myths in Aircraft Transactions (Pt. 2)

Jason and I gave our presentation on "Disastrous Myths in Aircraft Transactions" for the Lawyer-Pilots Bar Association in Savannah on July 16. Our myths rang some bells with several group members and a lot of horror stories were shared. So we hope that summarizing these common and damaging myths, with ways to spot and avoid them, was helpful.

As promised, here are our presentation materials for whoever is interested.

It was also great catching up with old friends and meeting new ones from across the country. And we were honored to receive an amazing set of Aeronautical Sectional Map Coasters! Created by the LPBA's own Carol Might, with Aeronautical Charts Art. (Great gifts for any pilots you know.)
